MEZCAL

Mezcal is a distilled spirit that is produced from a type of agave plant called maguey. While tequila is a regional spirit that can only be produced in Jalisco, maguey is grown in many parts of Mexico to be distilled into Mezcal although most of the production takes place in Oaxaca. Mezcal is made from the heart of the maguey plant called the "piña" and this part of the plant is roasted which often gives Mezcal an intense smokey flavour as opposed to tequila which is steamed under high pressure giving a cleaner and crisper flavour. As they say in Oaxaca "para todo mal, Mezcal, y para todo bien también" (for everything bad, Mezcal, and for everything good, too).

TEQUILA

Tequila's name is derived from the town around which it is grown in the state of Jalisco in central Mexico, 65km northwest of Guadalajara. Tequila is a spirit that is made from the blue agave plant and is most commonly produced as Blanco, Silver or Plata (white tequila that is un-aged), Reposado (aged a minimum of 2 months but less than a year in oak barrels), Anejo (Aged a minimum of 1 year) or Extra Anejo (aged a minimum of 3 years). There are 2 different categories of tequila; 100% agave tequila, which is tequila in its purest form made only from 100% pure agave with no added sugars or Mixto, which is tequila made from no less than 51% agave but with sugars added to make up the remainder. In this restaurant we are proud to stock only 100% agave tequila.
